A Royal Imbroglio.

Just at present the court of "Lilliput" has given room for a great deal of gossip. His Serene Highness the hereditary prince, and the Serene Highness the princess, after a few months of matrimonial bliss, have quarreled and separated. It happened on this wise.
(The information I give I know to be correct, as it was communicated to me by an intimate friend of the young prince, and I was at Nice myself when the affair occurred.) About four years ago the young prince of Monaco married, through the influence of the empress Eugenie, the Lady Mary Douglas, sister of the duchess of Hamilton and daughter of H. L. H. the prince's father, the duke of Hamilton, and grand-daughter of the celebrated Prince Eugene Beauharnais. The wedding was magnificent, and the bride and bridegroom appeared exceedingly well pleased with each other. After a brief honeymoon both their highnesses returned to Monaco to reside with the reigning prince and princess. Very soon afterward the young lady commenced making unpleasant remarks to her friends of the court etiquette, which she declared was utterly unendurable, especially to a free-born English woman. An instance will suffice: One morning her Serene Highness came down to breakfast before the whole family was assembled. To her amusement, she beheld on each plate an egg labeled "For His Serene Highness the reigning prince." "For H. S. H. the hereditary prince," "For H. S. H. the hereditary prince," "For H. S. H. the hereditary prince." Being in a hurry and hungry, "Her Serene Highness the hereditary princess" sat down herself and ate her own egg and the eggs of her neighbors. Horror! Court etiquette was overthrown. The egg destined for the august prince Florestan II. had been eaten by his own daughter-in-law! The outraged majesty of Monaco was indignant, and the youthful aspirant to the throne by no means mild in his reproaches. However, true Douglas as she is, the old blood of Archibald Bell-the-cat boiled over, and the princess Mary is reported to have read the serene family famous lecture.
Matters went on in this way until the poor girl could stand it no longer, and one fine day escaped from "jail," ran down to the station and took the first train for Nice.

A telegram was sent to the grand-duchess at Nice to arrest her as soon as she got out of the carriage. Accordingly, to her terror, when she put her foot on terra firma there stood two guardsmen ready to pounce upon her. It was, however, no joke to arrest an imperial princess, for such Lady Mary is by birth. The men hesitated, but not so the princess. Brought up at Nice, she knew all the roads and by-paths of the place by heart.
Tucking up her petticoats, instead of going out by the ordinary exit she made off as fast as her legs could carry her out of the station to the fence which separates the line from the road, climbed over it and ran as swiftly as a hunted deer through the fields, pursued by the two gendarmes, who, however, soon gave up the chase. Her Serene Highness finally reached the Villa Arson, almost two miles distant, terribly frightened and with her clothes pretty nearly torn off her back. Here she found that notwithstanding her flight she had been traced, and her husband was waiting for her. She had been yielded up to her husband for little son, born soon after the flight from Monaco. Vain have been the young man's attempts to induce her to return to him, vain his appeals to the pope to use his influence, vain even the threats of law. Last winter the prince induced the King of Italy to permit an attempt to abduct the child from the princess whilst she was staying in Florence with the grand-duchess Marie of Russia; but the guards of the imperial lady prevented the entrance of the Florentine gendarmes from even entering the palace, and the next day the princess of Monaco fled with her child to Switzerland. What the future developments of this singular affair will be, time will show.
The husband seems determined not to yield, and has recently employed the celebrated lawyer M. Grandpre as his counsel. It is stated that undue influence of a malicious kind has been used to prejudice both the duchess of Hamilton and her daughter against the prince, but all who know the truly lofty mind of the duchess will be sure that, although the reason for the princess's conduct has never transpired, it must be a very good one, or her mother would never uphold her as she does.
Not the slightest blame is attributable to the princess of Monaco, and her reputation remains utterly above suspicion.—Lippincott's Magazine.

History of the Horse.

In looking backward as to the employment of the horse, it is remarkable how slowly he has come into use for the different industrial purposes of man. Although mentioned in the most ancient literary monuments of the world, in the Vedas and the Book of Job, his employment as a domesticated animal was undoubtedly unknown in the dawn of history.
His name does not occur with the numerous flocks and herds of Job himself, and he could not have been passed over in the Decalogue if he had held places with the cow, the ox, and ass in the stables of the Israelites. Indeed, even now over a great part of the world, the horse is only employed for war and parade. In the land of the Vedas itself, as we learn from an instructive passage in the Rig Veda, the horse was used by the Indians for the purpose of conveyance ever seen to that country.
In China also, although the Chinese animals of a war conducted by that empire 109 A.
C. to obtain some horses of a celebrated breed in the country about Kholand, modern travelers in China tell us that the horse is rarely seen there. Even in Arabia the animal is seldom employed for useful purposes. In the Hedjaz, Barchanah found that the sole means of conveyance were asses and camels, and the post between Mecca and Medina was served by the former animals. Von Wrede made his late adventurous journey through Hadramaut on a camel, and does not seem to have encountered a single horseman. Even in the desert, those grassy limestone uplands of Central Arabia, the headquarters of the most valuable of the race of pure Araba, Palgrave, who had unexampled opportunities for forming an opinion, estimates the whole amount of horse population (to use a convenient French expression) at a number under 5,000, and these are clearly retained chiefly for war-purposes by the Wahabi owners. Nay, even in advanced England the ex still holds his place: in the plough in certain counties.

When Britain first became known to history, we find its inhabitants in possession of a useful and old horse and of great skill in chariot-driving; and the fact as recorded by Cæsar raises many a curious problem as to whence the Celts, not generally an equestrian race, obtained their horses and their art, and as to what the state of roads must have been to permit of their employment. The kindred Gauls on the other side of the Channel were also in possession of horses, but not apparently of war chariots; and the rich horse pastures of Belgium are specially mentioned.
Both races probably obtained the original stock from the Phœnicians, the great carriers of antiquity, and whose early settlement on the Red Sea or Persian Gulf before their migration to the shores of the Mediterranean, brought them closely in connection with the horse-breeding races of the East. Solomon, however, obtained his horses not from Arabia, but from Egypt, and as Canon Rawlinson informs us that horses were unknown in that land before the eighteenth dynasty, it is probable that the Phœnicians imported them into that country also. Whence they obtained their horse stock, however, is at present entirely unknown, for we presume our readers will not accept the theory of Captain Upton, an enthusiastic admirer of the Arab horse, that God, by a special interposition, directed to the Ark the two most perfect animals then in existence, from which they found their way to Central Arabia, and their offspring, preserving their pure blood to this day, have enabled us to enable and improve the studs of the world.—Edinburgh Review.

It is true, as asserted in the correspondence of an exchange, that the newly-arrived English prisoners all claim an acquaintance with the late Secretary of the State, and that they have been organized to Cuba as well as of the late Secretary of the State. It is also true that the late Secretary of the State was a man of high standing and of high ability. It is also true that the late Secretary of the State was a man of high standing and of high ability. It is also true that the late Secretary of the State was a man of high standing and of high ability.

We hope that the approaching New Year's day will not be celebrated with wine-bibbing and drunkenness. But why hope? A veritable lake of fire underlies the community. We float upon a sea of rot-gut. Crime, destitution and every nameless kind of sin and innumerable sorrow spring out of it. The road to the bottomless pit is nearly perpendicular. It is a steep, slippery slope. It is a steep, slippery slope. It is a steep, slippery slope.

Whether one evil ever really corrects another is perhaps too profound a question for us to discuss until we have time to write our part of the philosophy in book form. So far, however, as current newspaper life shows any light upon it we would incline to believe the matter on the negative side. For instance, as our old friend the general proposition that the New York Herald is destitute of moral principle and has but little respect for the obligation to be neighborly and fair. But what addition to that hypothetical quality "the sum of human happiness" does the Times suppose will be made by its habit of running so frequent attention to the Herald's viciousness? There is always a spice of grandeur about a gladiatorial combat between two great journals in the city of New York. It is a grand, noble, heroic thing. It is a grand, noble, heroic thing.

An investigation recently instituted shows that nearly all the public school buildings in New York City are very badly ventilated. It is a grand, noble, heroic thing. It is a grand, noble, heroic thing. It is a grand, noble, heroic thing.

of greenbacks are piled up behind their backs and these horses make daily "drifts" of thousands towards the heaps of wealth with one weak eye, or lolling a thought at a tuck of paper is just "as good as gold."

Such animals are a treasure to the Treasury. They possess also a considerable amount of self-will, never having any conversation with the asses inside the building, whom they seem to regard as a vulgar herd. We hope the country will not compel the Department to discharge these horses by any one of the usual means, for they are not only a nuisance, but they are also a source of revenue.

We should also like to add that the report about the Treasurer's having paid $27 for repairing an old wheelbarrow is a scandalous and unpardonable falsehood. The original report shows that the sum mentioned covers the expense of fixing four wheelbarrows and the purchase of one new one. Why will people lie so? The public will see from our expose that this last shameful attempt to fasten a charge of extravagance upon the Department is more than likely, the odiousness of such a charge and the odiousness of such a charge.

THE VIRGINIANS.

A Protest From Her Owner.

New York, Dec. 29.—John F. Patterson of this city has sent a letter to Secretary Fish stating that the vessel of the late Secretary of the State, the Virginia, is the registered owner of the steamer Virginia. He protests against the opinion of the Attorney General, by which he is condemned unconditionally to the Treasury. He states that the Virginia was built for the late Secretary of the State, and that she was never intended to be a part of the Treasury. He also states that the Virginia was never intended to be a part of the Treasury.

To-Night.—At Washington Hall, at 8, Concert by the First German Lutheran Choir.

Claret Lodge Knights Prizes at Hirsch's Hall.

CITY NOTES.

—The great question of the year, far above law or politics, is the question of corporal punishment in our schools.

—The livermen are fixing a scale of prices for New Year's day. This scale will fluctuate up or down according to the amount of snow on the ground.

—Prof. Fanning's dancing schools are making the little folks so graceful and light-footed they don't touch their heels to the pavement any more, but walk on their toes dancin' style.

J. M. Mayer, the carriage and sleigh builder on Mill street, has two very handsome Portlands for sale which he advertises in our other column. They can be bought at a bargain.

—Everyone in the city who had a horse or riding money to spare to hire one was out riding Monday afternoon. The sleighing was good, and the snow fell so on the avenue, kicked up by the high-stepping trotters, a person could hardly see.

—The liveliest place in town is McCausland's shipyard. A large force is employed and a big amount of work done. The two new barges being built by the firm are in frame and work on them progressing very steadily and satisfactorily.

—A chap in upper Kingston yesterday pulled so hard to keep his horse in a trot while trying to pass mine host Osterhout and a Freeman reporter he nearly choked his horse and was in danger of apoplexy himself, and didn't pass 'em at that. Shoo, Amos!

—The uptown young folks who used the gallery at Music Hall as a fortress, and bombarded the people down stairs with spit balls on Christmas eve say the manager needs' make such a fuss about the matter. "Spit balls, spit balls," make near so much dirt as his spitting tobacco juice on the floor.

—One of the uptown Justices of the Peace having become disgusted at the lack of plaintiffs in his court has made arrangements to go into the vegetable business. The other justice expects a rush of business then, and it's high time he gets it, for his pen is corroding very fast.

—Dr. Rosenkrans has the violin sail to have been used by Rip Van Winkle when he sat on the tavern door in the mountains. It looks very much as though Dan Van Winkle had had hold of it, otherwise we cannot vouch for the truth of the assertion.

—Riding down hill on hand sleds in frequent streets is now quite general and should be stopped. On Monday we saw a spirited horse much frightened by hand sleds on Hudson street near Gross' pond, and an accident from a runaway barely prevented. The same nuisance is committed on Warts a d'Cham street.

A lady went into a store uptown the other day and said she wanted half a dozen lemons. She wanted them large, as she intended to step up some citrus, and the large ones were the best for that purpose. The gentlemanly grocerman was horror-stricken at this barefaced admission of cannibalism, but found out afterwards the good lady only meant to stew citron. This is not near so funny as the chap who went up to another the other day and said, "I was most terribly excited in your young man." Of course he meant deceived.

—The rage upon nowadays is rolling up for turkeys, geese, sets of harness, cutters, &c., and in fact anything a man wants to dispose of. The way tickets are disposed of is somewhat novel. A party got together and throw dice as to who shall pay for the tickets. In this way the tickets are rapidly disposed of, and at the night of the falling one or two persons own the whole lot. Instead of throwing pennies in the old-fashioned way, the lady again resorted to a see who shall be the lucky owner of the property. It's the easiest way in the world to get rid of second-class goods at double their value.

Fine Affairs.

The Christmas Eve concert at the Port Ewen M. E. Church was a great success, so much so that it will be repeated on New Year's Eve. The admission is only ten cents.

Sale of Railroad Rolling Stock.

All the rolling stock and machinery belonging to the N. Y. & S. R. Railroad was sold on Saturday by Sheriff Korf, under a judgment of the Supreme Court in favor of Mr. Co. It was purchased by Thomas Cornell for $100, subject to the mortgage.

A Deceased Genius.

Charles Williams, the colored boot-black so well known uptown is dead. Poor Charley was quite a genius in his way, and might have made his mark in the world had not exposure and hardship run him down in his youth. He died in New York on the 26th inst. of consumption. It is said this boy lost some twelve hundred dollars in the Poughkeepsie Savings Bank, saved from his earnings.

Taylor Decker's Pung.

Taylor Decker's pung is one of those sleek, the comfort of which is only surpassed by its extreme ugliness. It is one of those high-backed old pungs in which our grandfathers, if we are so fortunate as to be able to date from so remote an ancestry, used to take the whole family to church and then have room enough for the foot stoves. Taylor's pung is the mate to the one General Washington used to visit the picket stations about Valley Forge in during that severe winter when the great grandfathers of those who now ride in Bath-Portlands used to eat their shoes with as thankful hearts as the sports of to-day swallow roasts from the half shell—that's the reason Taylor won't take a farm for his pung.

Back Again.

Leon Washburn's show show, which started out on a tour of the various towns in this county and those of Sullivan and Delaware, have returned to this city after a successful trip. The company, after getting in the mountain towns of Delaware, met with many adventures, as traveling through snow-drifts in a wagon was a most comical and amusing progression. The company have disbanded, most of the members having gone to New York to fill engagements.

The Ice Crop.

We notice in many of our along-the-river exchanges fears expressed that the ice crop this winter will prove a failure. Men are working in the business of cutting and storing ice hereabouts have as yet no fears of a short harvest of ice. In conversation with a gentleman who has been in the employ of the Knickerbocker Company for a score of years a Freeman reporter was informed that no doubt was entertained by the large corporations but that the harvest would be as abundant and of as good a quality as usual, there being two full months of water weather yet to come in which ice always forms of sufficient thickness for remunerative storage.

Surrogate's Court.

In the matter of the final accounting of John Van Vechten, one of the executors under the last will and testament of Elias Elmdorf, deceased, the Surrogate has rendered his decision in favor of the petitioner, Eli Elmdorf, that her claim be paid with the costs of the proceeding. Elias Elmdorf, well known in this city as the mother of Nicholas Elmdorf, left a will at her death in 1858, in which are the following clauses: The first provision authorizes and empowers her executors "to sell at public or private sale all or any of my real estate, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay my just debts and settle my estate. There is a further clause directing her will and to appraise lands sold first, and if possible to reserve the homestead farm of her father, situate in the town of Kingston. The second provision gives all her personal property to Sarah, wife of her son Nicholas, for life, and after her death to the children of her son Nicholas and Sarah his wife. The third and last provision of the will is as follows: "Thirdly, I hereby give and devise all of my real estate of every name and kind whatsoever and wheresoever situate, to my said executors, John Van Vechten and Conrad Brinkman, and to their survivors (to be held by them and their survivors in trust nevertheless to and for the following purposes, to-wit: To receive the issues, rents and profits thereof and to pay the same to Sarah, wife of my said son Nicholas, to be applied by her to the support of the family of my said son Nicholas. The rents, issues and profits thereof to be so paid, to be applied during the life of said Nicholas, and during the life of said Sarah, and after their death, and the death of them my said executors, and the survivor of them shall convey the same in fee to my grand children, the children of my said son Nicholas and Sarah his wife."

The executors from time to time under the power given in the will sold and conveyed real estate, which, with personal property inherited, amounted to the sum of $21,183.92; they paid $28,159.53, left a balance due such executors of $1,023.91. The only debt remaining unpaid was that of Mrs. Eli Elmdorf, amounting to $1,931.94. A judgment was entered for this amount, and a petition was made in January, 1873, to the Surrogate to have such amount paid out of the estate. About the same time the executor, Van Vechten, filed a petition for a final accounting.

The Surrogate, Peter Cantine, in a long and able opinion, decides the intention of the testatrix was to devise her personal property, and have her real estate sold and the proceeds applied on her debts. The Surrogate then says: "The next question that presents itself for consideration is the real estate to be considered as personally under the doctrine of equitable conversion. The creditor claims the manifest intention of the will is to treat the real estate as money, or at least as may be necessary for the payment of debts. On the other hand the executors claim the rule does not apply." In considering these questions the Surrogate declares the executors' claim does not apply. He also says there have been payments made by the executors from the sales of real estate more than enough to pay the creditor. In this the executors erred so far as the creditors are concerned; they should have used the income to pay the interest, taxes and repairs. "The executors in this case appear in no favorable light. Their first duty was to pay the debts. This they have neglected, as to this creditor, while they have paid others in full, and used other funds to pay interest, repairs and taxes, which should have been borne out of the homestead farm."

The Surrogate, after deciding several minor points in the case, closes his opinion as follows: "It follows from these views that the account be adjusted and the executors be adjudged to pay Mrs. Knator the amount due to her, with costs of these proceedings."

"The Arguments of '49."

Bret Hart, the graceful story writer, under-hearted poet and zealous gentleman, will, on Friday evening, deliver his celebrated and intensely interesting and popular lecture entitled "The Arguments of '49," before the Rondout Lecture Association in Washington Hall, and as many of our other lecture goers will pleasantly remember one of the brightest ornaments of the lecture platform, Rev. Thomas Starr King, who died some years since.

Some ten years ago Thomas Starr King, then unknown but near the end of his short but noble and glowing life, was guiding an acquaintance through the dimly, gold-strewn recesses of the Government Mill building in San Francisco. Passing before entering the Secretary's little office, he said: "Now I want you to meet a young man who will be heard of far and wide some of these days."

A Marvellous Pump.

Yesterday morning we visited Greenbush to witness the operation of the wonderful wrecking pump of Mr. Elijah Brinard. It will be remembered that about a week ago a boat loaded with 8,500 bushels of corn sank at the elevator dock in Greenbush. The cargo was sold by the insurance people to parties in this city, and they employed Mr. Brinard to remove the corn from the sunken boat. He at once commenced work with his pump, and in two days succeeded in recovering over seven thousand bushels of the corn from the wreck. Every kernel of which was drawn from the water by suction and passed through the pump and discharged into a boat. The discharge pipe of the pump, as used in this work, is sixteen inches in diameter, and when it is worked to its full capacity, as it was while we were present, it discharges between 16,000 and 18,000 gallons of water per minute! The water and corn are passed over a sieve, the water separating from the corn, which falls into the hold of the boat. In one hour Saturday this pump recovered 1,500 bushels of corn. It is certainly the most marvellous piece of machinery for pumping we have ever seen, and we wish our citizens generally could see it in operation. —Albany Express.

Early Entrance Tickets.

The "Early Entrance" movement at Crane's Lyceum course has proved very successful and popular, for it has provided a real convenience. It divided the crowd and lessened the rush at the main entrance and comfortably seated the regular patrons of the course—the season ticket holders. This idea of Crane's was a very happy one. The stage door, on the occasion of Gough's lecture, opened precisely at the time announced, and in fifteen minutes the lecture was commenced.
